State Department spokesman Charles Bray said that the United States has been or will be in touch with the Soviet Union, India, Pakistan and other governments about the crisis arising from the Bengali uprising in East Pakistan against the central Pakistani government.

As Pay Board Backs Merit Raises Big U.S. Firms Win Price Rises

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (AP)—A commission approved two big steel firms' price increases today, a move that is expected to continue the trend of granting merit raises to other major firms.

Revenues by an estimated 0.75 percent for Bethlehem and 1.8 percent for National, the commission said. It added that the increases had been justified by substantial rises in costs of materials and labor and that they would not widen the companies' profit margins.

The Pay Board, in its first specific ruling on merit-pay raises, said that existing contract provisions for merit raises may be continued, so long as "established rate ranges" are not increased more than 5.5 percent a year in new contracts.

It said where no contractual merit-pay plans exist, employers may start new merit-pay plans if they are administered in good faith, are in line with previous pay policies and provide for rate ranges which do not increase more than 5.5 percent a year.

Egypt Says Sadat Didn't Bar Peace

Israel Must Apply UN Resolution

CAIRO, Nov. 23 (NYT).—The Egyptian government's chief spokesman, Tahsin Bashir, said tonight that "peace could be saved in the Middle East" if Israel gave evidence of intention to implement the United Nations Security Council resolution of Nov. 22, 1957.

Mr. Bashir emphasized that declarations by President Anwar Sadat over the weekend about the necessity of war to recover occupied Arab lands did not represent the end to acceptance of a peaceful solution.

The spokesman made the remarks during a briefing on a meeting of Mr. Sadat earlier in the day with an African delegation seeking to break a deadlock between Egypt and Israel.

"The destruction of millions of human beings is in his eyes, the lesser evil when weighed against the awful alternative, conducting negotiations with Israel," he said.

"Millions of Egyptians must die in order that Mr. Sadat will not have to conduct negotiations with the state of Israel, which aspires to nothing except peace and security with agreed and defensible borders."

Mr. Eban said the United States' withholding of Phantom warplanes will not bring Mr. Sadat to negotiations.

"Boastful Threats" He said the Soviet Union will show no restraint in arming Egypt, but added that Mr. Sadat's threats are "boastful" and "he cannot live up to them."

"The world may rightfully ask what purpose the president of a time when to achieve by war at a time when the fruits of peace are within his grasp if he only saw fit to enter into negotiations," Mr. Eban said.

"He can open the Suez Canal without war. He can restore the cities on the canal. . . . He can negotiate with Israel on a peace which will contain an agreement for the withdrawal of military forces to secure and recognized borders without war," he said.

U.S. Rabbi Sure Moscow Will Fill Levin Post Soon

MOSCOW, Nov. 23 (NYT).—A New York rabbi who flew here last weekend for the funeral of Rabbi Yehuda Leib Levin of Moscow, a Jewish community leader, said he was sure the post would be filled soon.

Rabbi Arthur Scheraga of the Park East Synagogue in Manhattan discussed prospects for filling the vacant post after meeting with the Soviet official charged with the supervision of religious affairs.

Relating his 90-minute conversation with the Soviet official, Fyodor V. Makarshev, the New York rabbi said he had conveyed the grief of the U.S. Jewish community on the death of Mr. Levin, whom he described as "an eminent religious leader."

Mr. Makarshev, a deputy chairman of the government's Council on Religious Affairs, said in reply that Rabbi Levin "indeed rendered great service and will be difficult to replace."

The rabbi, who died last Wednesday at age 77, was a controversial figure since some had accused him of being a spokesman for the official Soviet line in opposition to Zionism.

War Talk in Cairo

When President Sadat puts on a uniform, goes to the front, and tells the troops there is "no longer any hope whatsoever of a peaceful settlement" and "there is nothing left for us but the battle," as he did the other day, he is not so much beginning the countdown to D-Day. Rather, he is striving to put credibility into his diplomacy. In particular to convince the United States that he will not and cannot move any further toward a settlement with Israel. The method of Egypt's diplomacy is to appeal to Washington's interest in avoiding war, improving relations with the Arab states and accommodating Moscow, in order to induce Washington to "deliver" Israel. By that process, Cairo believes, it will be able to avoid dealing directly with Israel itself.

For all his strivings, however, Mr. Sadat comes on poorly as a man of war. The joke in Cairo is that to make good his pledge of war or peace in 1971, he will decree indefinite extension of the year. "You don't make war by encouraging tourism," Libya's President Gadhafi reportedly said about him. And it's so. By his economic policy, by his willingness to move against accused Soviet agents in Egypt (and Sudan), and by efforts to normalize relations with Western nations, Mr. Sadat has won not only sympathy and respect but a reputation as a man of peace. Ironically, he is now forced to wield the implicit threat of losing control of his army and public, even though he surely realizes what the costs to himself and his country would be.

President Sadat's best immediate prospect probably lies at the United Nations, that ever scorned and ever useful institution. His battle preparations, civil defense exercises, oratory and all the rest doubtless will bring Egypt broad support in the campaign it plans to take to the General Assembly early next month. (It will mark China's Mideast debut in the UN, by the way.) The assembly's final resolution will be unenforceable, but—more to Egypt's current points—it will lack the ambiguities of the Security Council's 1967 resolution and Mr. Sadat will be able to present it to his countrymen as a triumph portending the early liberation of Sinai. It will, in a word, buy him some time.

This is a good moment for the United States to sit tight. There is no reason to encourage Mr. Sadat's tendency to look to Washington to pull him off the horns of the dilemma on which he has impaled himself. Similarly, however, there is no reason for Washington to take steps to impale him more sharply. Specifically, this hardly seems the right time for a conspicuous decision to sell Israel more Phantoms. The delivery rate of Phantoms is such that a new deal would not alter Israel's immediate military capability. But a new deal would inflame Arab opinion and embarrass Mr. Sadat at a delicate hour. As we have suggested before, everybody would be better off if the American-Israeli arms relationship were put on the basis of a steady, discreet "non-political" flow.

India, Pakistan and the UN

The time has come for the United Nations Security Council to take up on an urgent basis the threat of all-out war along the Indian-Pakistani border. Only the United Nations has the possibility of acting effectively to defuse this situation for which Pakistan bears by far the heavier responsibility, but which clearly now constitutes a threat to international peace and security.

Pakistan claimed yesterday that India had launched an "all-out offensive" in the Jessore area of East Pakistan. It seems probable that the scale of the action and the size of the Indian forces involved are being wildly exaggerated by the Pakistanis. If so, India should welcome an examination of the situation by the Security Council and perhaps an on-the-spot investigation by neutral UN observers. There can be little doubt that India has been building up its forces systematically along the border and putting them on a war footing, even carrying out counter-thrusts in support of rebel Pakistani guerrillas against regular Pakistani forces in Bengal.

The basic cause of the war threat to the subcontinent remains, however, the action of President Yahya Khan to suppress the elected leaders of East Pakistan and to rule that province by armed terror. It was this brutal action that provoked the headlong flight into India of East Pakistani refugees now said to number more than nine million.

Thus abruptly burdened with an economic and social problem of almost unimaginable proportions, India understandably resents any proposal for UN intervention that might appear to equate its behavior with that of the Pakistani government. Yet action under UN auspices represents the only possibility in sight for restoring peace and eventually repatriating the refugees.

In rejecting U Thant's offer to try to help ease the tensions between India and Pakistan, Prime Minister Gandhi said correctly that the "root of the problem is the fate of the 75 million people of East Bengal and their inalienable rights." But the best hope of securing the rights of those people, including the nine million now on Indian soil, lies in the cooperation of both India and Pakistan with the secretary-general or any other instrument of the United Nations that the Security Council may designate.

International Opinion

Sadat's Speech to Troops

Aside from the spirited words to his soldiers in the true manner of the leader, President Sadat admitted that he had lost patience with the Americans and had told them so. How strong a tug on the alarm bell is this statement? The evidence that it was meant to be taken seriously was certainly backed by Sadat's conclusion that there could be no discussion on the opening of the Suez Canal until Israel accepted total withdrawal from all territories occupied in 1967 and agreed to Egyptian forces crossing the canal.

Even if he were adopting a posture for the benefit of the forthcoming United Nations discussion of the problem, or to bring some final pressure on the Americans or any other calculated intervention in the complex political links that exist over the Middle East problem, he might find he had compromised himself beyond withdrawal in his own countrymen's eyes. The dangers are too visible and too sharply pointed simply to be brushed aside. If the common desire of the Americans and the Russians to keep the peace is weakened by circumstance or misunderstanding, then the most critical point since 1967 as between Egypt and Israel might now be signalled.

Franco-American Drug Case

Because a drug trafficker... could benefit from American legislation on denunciation, good consciences are now found both in the United States and France who proclaim there is something rotten in the kingdom of secret services. What we have been watching since is the development of a political maneuver... It is common knowledge that the production and exploitation network of Laotian opium is manipulated by the CIA through Vietnamese politicians. This is more than a source of profit, this is a tactical necessity for the CIA. That is why, acting like any "gang," it has used existing networks to eliminate political adversaries.

In the spy world, there is only one rule: effectiveness. Now in the Far East, the French were retaining considerable influence and thus were dangerous for the Americans. They even became the men to knock down after the [De Gaulle] Phnom Penh speech. Since 1969, a covert, merciless war has been going on, and one would not know who emerged the winner if President Nixon had not recently demanded a reorganization of the CIA, guilty of having misled him, notably in the Laotian and Cambodian affairs. It is normal among secret services to settle old scores at all levels. The visible aspect of such a settlement is now the Delouette case. Delouette's version (contradicted by both policemen and certain American political circles) is supported solely by his own affirmations... It happens that Delouette knew Paul Fournier. It is normal for a criminal to know the name of his adversary. This does not prove that he acted on the latter's orders.

The fact remains that it is easy—and tempting—to lure public opinion by linking together two sensational words: espionage and drugs. The effect is guaranteed beforehand, and the Americans knew the echo this would have even in France in certain circles craving a scandal. They have won: in the realm of secret services there are no game rules: anything goes, to compromise the other side. But the bomb is only a firecracker and its smoke only hides a profound rancor.

Seventy-Five Years Ago

November 24, 1896

NEW YORK—The Railway Mail Service, which has charge of the wagon deliveries in New York City, is about to experiment with horseless wagons with which to collect mail from the street boxes. The matter has been under consideration for some time, the second Assistant Postmaster-General announced yesterday. The new process is thought to be more efficient and, in the long run, a great deal less expensive.

Fifty Years Ago

November 24, 1921

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Admiral Earl Beatty put an official end to his very official visit to America, as the country's host, when he left this city for Canada today. The heartiness of the reception that he received from the American people, no matter where he appeared, warmed the heart of the gallant British admiral and was second, only slightly, to that which was accorded to the great French Marshal Foch.

Heath—3: Dining in Europe

By C. L. Sulzberger

LONDON.—The oldest symbol of a link between Britain and continental Europe is that of a tunnel under the English Channel. Strangely enough, although this was already discussed more than a century and a half ago, it may prove one of the last pan-European projects realized—despite the fact that the United Kingdom is well on its way to Common Market membership.

The English, still tending to be insular in their traditions, even today remain less enthusiastic about a tunnel than the French. President Pompidou and Foreign Minister Schumann are in the van of those who would like to ratify the growth of the European community by building a direct road between the continent and the British Isles.

Prime Minister Heath is also happy about the idea; but none of the specific engineering designs so far advanced suit his highly pragmatic hopes. The prime minister, when not living in his official residences of 10 Downing Street or Chequers, has a home so near the geographic area of a tunnel that he has his own very special views.

Dinner in France

His house is only about 12 miles from where the entrance would be on the British side. Therefore he has the understandable belief that what should be constructed is the sort of subchannel tube that would allow him, on the spur of the moment, to get into his car and drive to France for dinner.

But that, unfortunately for him, is not the kind of scheme being presented by the experts. They favor a complicated system that would require transport of cars between Britain and France on trains. This would mean making travel arrangements days if not weeks ahead. He would like a big wide tunnel through which cars could easily drive in both directions with a minimum of complication.

If Heath can't have that—which is a pity because he has been the foremost champion of British admission to political and economic Europe—he would settle for a bridge above the channel. Yet here again the experts have been warning that this is exceedingly difficult as well as risky because of storms and crowded shipping lanes.

Combination

Therefore, the prime minister seems ready to settle for a combination. Recognizing that the channel is relatively shallow along both the British and French shores but contains a trough in the middle, he would like to study the possibility of a short tunnel linked by two bridges, one on each side.

Unfortunately the engineers don't seem in a mood to produce this kind of project. So, despite his gustatorial eagerness to pave a road to French restaurants and also despite the enthusiasm of his good friend Pompidou, the scheme seems far from imminent. It is odd that the ancient idea of a channel tunnel hasn't received a more evident fillip since Parliament voted to join the Common Market. The thought of a tunnel has been kicking around since the 18th century. Indeed, in Napoleon's time the London press was publishing drawings of how such a tunnel, if constructed, could help French armies overrun England.

Prime Minister Gladstone's government investigated the prospect in 1883 and a joint parliamentary committee reviewed its "expediency." The proposal was rejected after the Duke of Cambridge, commander in chief of the army, testified that there was risk of invasion if a tunnel were constructed "and therefore I think you ought to run no risk."

Scheme Dropped

Although the scheme was dropped, the chairman of the channel tunnel company prophesied, 58 years ago: "I am nearly certain that this tunnel will be made sooner or later." The probability is that he will in the end be proven right but the time elapsed is longer than anyone would have foreseen. It seems obvious in these days of wholly different strategic concepts and growing unity among Common Market members—now about to include Britain—that some kind of road between the United Kingdom and the continent must be built.

Whether this will run under or over the channel or combine the features of both routes cannot be foreseen. Nor is it likely that the prime minister will soon be described by his French admirers as the man who came to dinner—at least in the informal sense he fancies.

Nowhere will the test be more meaningful than in the complex international issues of arms control. As a beginning Peking's chief delegate, Chiao Kuan-hua, has staked out a return to the five principles of peaceful co-existence and the "Bandung spirit" those generalizations of the 1950s, as a base of Chinese policy. Like President Nixon's "peace and prosperity" theme, it is the details that everyone will be waiting to see.

China today has two vast areas of interest in foreign affairs: its relationship with the superpowers, the Soviet Union and the United States, and its relationship with the world's small fry of nations. Beneath the generalizations of "Mao's thoughts" are some very pragmatic positions in the arms control field in relation to these two sets of international interests.

As to the superpowers, it is evident enough that Peking is playing off Washington against Moscow. Just as Moscow plays Washington against Peking and Washington plays Peking against Moscow. Of course none of the three capitals puts it that way out loud but the diplomats talk that way privately. In the view from Peking, the Soviet Union is the immediate threat with 900,000 troops on its long border with China. The United States is withdrawing in Asia but the American relationship over the decades ahead with Japan is of great interest to China.

As to the smaller nations, China obviously wants to play the role of benefactor. Peking, Chou En-lai has said, is not a superpower; rather it is the friend of the small who are oppressed by the Russians and/or the Americans. As the claimant to the true Communist faith, Peking at the UN can be expected to play the role of berating the small fry against the superpowers.

But if these are the generalizations of Chinese policy it is more complicated when it comes to some of the specific issues before the UN. In the arms control field, China has refused to sign either the partial nuclear test ban treaty or the nuclear non-proliferation treaty. Peking continues to test in the atmosphere and, along with France, to pollute the environment. China charges that the strategic arms limitation talks between Moscow and Washington are collusion by the superpowers against everybody else.

The reality behind these negatives is that China is a fledgling nuclear power. While it talks big it acts cautiously especially in relation to Moscow, as it builds toward a credible second strike capability over, perhaps, the next decade. That requires nuclear tests and while Peking could test underground it is easier and far less expensive to do so in the atmosphere, hence the opposition to signing the test ban. But what would China do if, miracle of miracles, the Soviet Union and the United States were to agree to the comprehensive test ban that would end underground testing, as so many of the world's smaller nations keep pressing them to do?

China is against the non-proliferation treaty but it is no more likely to pass its nuclear knowledge to others than are the United States and the Soviet Union, witness the Heikal account that Peking turned down Nasser asked for such help. But Peking has a direct interest in seeing that three of the potential nuclear powers—India, Japan and Israel—do not make their own bombs. How will Peking square this?

The world's attention focuses on the SALT talks, resumed this week in Vienna, but there also is resuming the UN disarmament conference at Geneva at which the comprehensive test ban is a growing issue. Will Peking take a seat at Geneva? If so, under what conditions and with what positions?

China long has plugged two lines in the arms control field: a world conference of all nations, not just of the five nuclear powers, and a nuclear free zone in Asia. Peking has rejected the Soviet and French calls for a Big Five nuclear conference.

China wants a world conference on the prohibition of and destruction of all nuclear weapons. This may sound ideal but in the real world it is the policy of the weak, much as the Soviet Union called for "the absolute banning of the atom weapon" back in the years of the vast American lead in this field while it was creating its own nuclear arsenal in secret.

A commitment to the world conference ideas is Peking's call

Panel Was Right

Warren Commission Eight Years Later

By David W. Belin

DES MOINES, Iowa.—The susceptibility of human nature to the mystique of conspiracy has afforded a fertile field for the assassination sensationalists. Through misrepresentation, omission and innuendo they have been successful in deceiving a large body of world public opinion into questioning the validity and veracity of the Warren Commission conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald was on Nov. 22, 1963, murdered President John F. Kennedy and Dallas police officer J. D. Tippit.

I served as an independent lawyer with the Warren Commission in 1964 and together with the distinguished California attorney, Joseph A. Ball, concentrated in what we called, "Area II: The determination of who was the assassin of President Kennedy."

In a sense, the Rosetta Stone to the solution of President Kennedy's murder is the murder of officer Tippit. It strikes at the heart of the claims of the assassination sensationalists who seek to prove that Oswald was in some way "framed." They allege that Oswald was innocent of the murders of both Kennedy and Tippit, and that the reason for his arrest had nothing to do with either killing.

"Plain Facts" For instance, Prof. Hugh Trevor-Roper in an introduction to one of the best-selling books attacking the Warren Commission Report wrote: "The plain fact is that there was no evidence at all to explain how or why the Dallas police instantly pounced on Oswald..."

"The plain fact" is that the Warren Commission Report accurately shows why Oswald was arrested. An alert citizen, Johnny Calvin Brewer, is the key witness. Brewer managed a shoe store in the vicinity of the place where Tippit was killed. I took his testimony in Dallas on April 2, 1964. Shortly after Brewer learned from radio news reports about the shooting of Tippit in his neighborhood, he became suspicious of the way a man first ducked into the doorway of his shoe store when police sirens were heard coming down the street and then left the front of the store soon after the police sirens subsided.

Brewer followed the man down the street into the Texas Theater and then had the cashier call the police. When the police arrived at the theater, Brewer pointed out the man, who was Lee Harvey Oswald. As the policeman approached, Oswald pulled out a revolver. Carrying a concealed gun is a crime. The fact that Oswald had such a weapon in his possession and drew it is highly suspicious.

Peking and Responsibility in UN

By Chalmers M. Roberts

WASHINGTON.—For many a long year proponents of China's admission to the United Nations argued that Peking, once inside the world organization, would assume a new sense of responsibility in the manifold problems of the troubled world. Now China is there on its own terms and we shall see the degree of truth in that contention.

Nowhere will the test be more meaningful than in the complex international issues of arms control. As a beginning Peking's chief delegate, Chiao Kuan-hua, has staked out a return to the five principles of peaceful co-existence and the "Bandung spirit" those generalizations of the 1950s, as a base of Chinese policy. Alsop's Logic

I read with great interest Joseph Alsop's column "Mrs. Gandhi and Her Peace Policy." It reminded me of the story where a man on trial for murdering his parents pleaded compassion on the grounds that he was an orphan. From the logic Alsop has developed in his column, I am sure he would have been on the side of the orphan and supported his cause on grounds of compassion.

But Sees Sales Up 10%

Daimler-Benz Expects Lower Profit in '71

STUTTGART, Nov. 23 (AP-DJ).—Daimler-Benz expects to report lower 1971 profit on a 10 to 15 percent increase in sales of both the parent company and the group, Heinz C. Hoppe, a member of the managing board, said today.

In 1970, the parent company reported net income of 246 million deutsche marks on sales of about $3.8 billion DM. Group sales were $1.9 billion DM.

Mr. Hoppe said, "We will still have a relatively good year in relation to other companies, but profit will certainly be down." He added that the company's production will be quite good this year.

Mr. Hoppe estimated that the company will produce more than 300,000 automobiles this year, compared with 250,491 in 1970. Commercial vehicle production, affected by a slowdown in worldwide capital goods markets, is expected to be just under 200,000 units this year, compared with 196,149 vehicles last year, he said.

In July, the company was forecasting commercial vehicle production in excess of 200,000 units in the current year. In 1970, Daimler-Benz paid a 27 percent dividend on 50-mark par value common stock, plus a 4.5 percent bonus. Maintaining the 27 percent dividend rate this year on unchanged capitalization would result in a payout of about 129.2 million marks.

Mr. Hoppe said the strike will cost Daimler-Benz production of about 1,200 automobiles and several hundred commercial vehicles a day.

Looking at 1972, Mr. Hoppe said Daimler-Benz and many other German companies will feel the culmination of this year's events, the mark float, protectionist measures and additional wage increases.

U.S. Rejects Bid Of Petrofina Unit

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (AP-DJ).—The Justice Department rejected today a proposal by Atlantic Richfield to sell the former Sinclair Oil properties in 14 Western states to American Petrofina of Texas, a unit of American Petrofina which is indirectly controlled by Petrofina of Belgium.

Atlantic Richfield is required by a 1970 anti-trust consent judgment to divest itself of the Sinclair properties. The department said it has notified Atlantic Richfield that American Petrofina is not acceptable as a purchaser of the properties that must be sold, but did not say why.

However, he was unable to give any more precise details of the decline in earnings or of the planned cut in dividend for the past business year. The company paid 10 percent on each 50-DM par valued share for 1969-70.

Supertanker Port Planned For Canada

First Facility to Serve Several Oil Companies

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (AP-DJ).—Continental Oil Co. and New Brunswick Development Corp. announced yesterday in St. John, New Brunswick, they plan to build a $60 million supertanker port and terminal about eight miles south of St. John.

The facility is expected to handle an ultimate flow of 300,000 barrels daily for U.S. and Canadian East Coast markets. Continental said it is also studying the feasibility of building a refinery near the terminal.

The New Brunswick port will handle vessels up to 300,000 deadweight tons; a tanker that size carries about 2.5 million barrels of crude oil.

'Flexible' U.S. Gold Stand Urged by Top Chase Official

ROME, Nov. 23 (AP-DJ).—A high Chase Manhattan Bank official said today that the United States should remain "flexible" on the relationship of the dollar to gold, and be prepared to change the dollar price of gold as part of an international monetary pact.

The official, William C. Butler, executive vice-president, made his remarks at a press conference preceding a luncheon address. He also expressed what he termed his personal pessimism that the desired effects of the government's wage-price policy would be evident by the end of 1972, as the government hopes.

Occidental Cuts Payout For Quarter by 50%

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 23 (Reuters).—Occidental Petroleum Corp. today slashed its quarterly cash dividend on common stock by 50 percent, to 12.5 cents from 25 cents, payable Jan. 14, to stockholders of record Dec. 10.

The company said the decision to conserve cash was prompted primarily by the likelihood of the need for extensive capital in Nigerian, Venezuelan and Peruvian drilling activities which are expected to start sometime between now and the end of the first quarter of 1972.

Dow Indicator Falls Below 800

State of Economy Worries Market

By Vartan G. Vartan NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (NYT).—Prices on the New York Stock Exchange kept retreating along a wide front today and the Dow Jones industrial average broke through the 800 psychological barrier in early afternoon, speeding up the selling process.

The Dow, many of whose blue chips now appear pale-blue, ended at 797.97 with a setback of 5.18 points. Its previous close below the 800 mark came last Dec. 7, when the indicator finished at 794.29.

Volume, running at the heaviest rate in nearly seven weeks, climbed to 18.84 million shares from yesterday's 15.29 million. Big Board turnover averaged 13.94 million shares daily during October.

Part of the market's problem was the expressed dismay over the administration's failure to get the economy rolling and to dispel confusion among businessmen. In the canyons of Wall Street, there were echoes of the phrase, "a crisis of confidence."

Occidental Petroleum, the volume leader, did its share in jarring the market by cutting the cash dividend in half. "Oxy" fell 7.8 to 61 1/8, after trading at 61, its poorest price since 1965.

As one of the most heavily traded of all Big Board stocks in recent years, Oxy sold above $5 in 1968. The stock has had a huge speculative following in the past. Much of its glamour faded more recently because of the deteriorating situation in Libya, where it has major interests.

To Help Resolve Growing Fuel Crisis Russians to Expand Strip Mining of Coal By Theodore Shabad MOSCOW, Nov. 23 (NYT).—Soviet planners have laid out an ambitious plan to expand the coal industry on the basis of surface operations to meet mushrooming energy requirements. The 30-year plan, running to the year 2000, suggests that the Russians are counting on an annual production of more than 1 billion tons of strip-mined coal from huge Siberian deposits to help resolve a growing fuel crisis in the western industrial regions of the country. Although environmental problems are beginning to weigh heavily in Soviet economic planning, they do not seem to have affected strip mining, which is to be concentrated in sparsely populated eastern areas. Soviet advocates of the expansion of strip mining consider their approach as significant as the continuing development of oil and gas reserves and of nuclear power in meeting future energy needs of the economy. The Soviet Union, unlike the United States, does not propose to develop its vast oil-shale reserves to supplement energy supplies. Details of Soviet strip-mining plans have been disclosed in the coal industry's trade magazine Ugol (Coal) by Nikolai V. Melnikov, a member of the Academy of Sciences who has long favored the use of the nation's vast surface reserves available for surface mining. According to Mr. Melnikov, the Ministry of the Coal Industry adopted the 30-year program at a meeting last May. Total coal reserves accessible from surface mines were placed at 200 billion tons, of which 98 percent are concentrated in the eastern regions. Only 81.8 billion tons were defined as high-grade bituminous coal, with the rest mainly lower-grade coals such as lignite. Over the long run, the Soviet Union expects to rely on underground mines for its high-grade coal, such as coking coal needed for the iron and steel industry, while using the poorer surface coals for power generation. "What's the O. U. score?" the fans would ask confidently, using local newspapers and radio stations around the state for answering services.

"Twenty to 7, Oklahoma," a voice would answer. "Twenty!" would be the startled reply. "Is that all we got?"

One Saturday, Jay Simon, a reporter for the Oklahoma paper, answered his unimpressive call from a Sooner fan apparently disguised that Oklahoma had won again, but, alas, failed to cover his bet.

"How much rice can a Chinaman eat?" Simon said to his cohorts. Since then, with no malice toward their Asian counterparts, Oklahoma fans have lived with the affectionate nickname "Chinamen."

'General' Practitioner Aids NFL Vikings' Sick Offense

By William N. Wallace. NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (NYT). —Bob Lee, who's he?

Robert M. Lee, called, of course, "General" by some of his teammates, is the first punter in the history of the National Football League to be promoted to starting quarterback for a first-place team two days before the 10th game of the season.

The team is the Minnesota Vikings, who had a sick offense averaging only 14 points a game under the direction of Gary Cuozzo and, on occasion, Norm Mac. The Vikings had been living by their defense, which was holding opponents to 8 points a game.

Lee, who had been a third-stringer behind Cuozzo and Sneed, had punted for an average of 38 yards, performed well if not brilliantly, as the Vikings beat the New Orleans Saints, 23-10, for their second highest point total of the season.

Not From Virginia? Is General Lee from Virginia? No, California. Sao Francisco, in fact, and he has a degree in architecture.

Due to be fined by the league office for kicking the officials' Mike Curtis, the Colts' line-backer. After Baltimore's loss to Miami, a furious Curtis called the officials "incompetent" and told a newsman, "Make sure you use that in all your stories."

Happy Feller in nine games had kicked only six field goals in 20 attempts for the Eagles, who dropped him and signed Tom Dempsey, discharged by New Orleans last summer and out of a football job for nine weeks.

Mike Lucal intercepted three passes by the Eagles, who had trouble with the Detroit run line and the 30-mile-an-hour wind in Chicago. "I wanted to show them (the fans) there's another middle line-backer out there," said Lucal—his allusion was to the Bears' Dick Butkus, acclaimed as the best. Added Lucal: "The Lions players' gave me the game ball. If they hadn't, I would have kept it anyway."

Similarly, if the Oklahoma defense can suppress the efficiency of Jerry Dyer, the fine Nebraska quarterback, and check the Cornhusker offense, the Sooners may win big.

Many observers are tabbing Oklahoma because of the team speed, home-field advantage and penchant for playing Nebraska tough, even in leaner years. Last year, the Cornhuskers squeaked through, 23-21, at Lincoln, Neb.

Nebraska, however, is coolly efficient. When the Cornhuskers take to a task, as they did against Colorado (31-7), they are imposing. Perhaps they are too well-balanced, particularly on defense. Unless the Cornhuskers succumb to the "Chinamen" at Owen Field, they should remain No. 1.

Falcons Overcome Packers

Berry Hits 16 Of 21 Passes

ATLANTA, Nov. 23 (UPI). —Quarterback Bob Berry, starting for the first time in five games, completed 16 of 21 passes last night to lead Atlanta to a 28-21 National Football League victory over Green Bay, the first time the Falcons have beaten the Packers in six tries.

The Falcons, with a 5-4-1 win-loss-tied record and only one game behind leading Los Angeles in the NFC's Western Division, were trailing, 14-12, when Jim (Cannonball) Butler took the second-half kickoff 62 yards to set up the go-ahead touchdown.

Berry took the Falcons in for six points in four plays, lofting a three-yard score to tight end Jim Mitchell.

Berry, injured six weeks ago and returning to action last week, completed four out of five passes for 60 yards as he led the Falcons 82 yards for a touchdown the first time they got the ball. Atlanta's score came on a one-yard run by Art Malone, a feat the Falcon running back repeated early in the final quarter when the Falcons took a 25-14 lead.

Yet another expedition has gone a-gley, this one a projected 600-mile cruise down the largely unexplored Komoe River from Volta to Abidjan, Ivory Coast, by 11 Swiss ladies, aged 19 through 50, in three motorized rubber boats. The ladies had paid $1,250 apiece to mustachioed Henri-Maurice Bernay, 47, a Swiss "professional explorer," who reasoned that "a river goes only one way—to the sea." True enough, but Bernay inexplicably neglected to reckon with the possibility of encountering a hippo or two during the float. Way behind schedule, the party was sought out last week by Say Kan N'na, an Abidjan photographer, who found them 375 miles from the capital.

Mrs. Borgnine said she had spent about $15,000 on guards at her Beverly Hills home since she had divorced her husband on Sept. 13, and that on one day, Borgnine kicked her and ripped out all the telephones. The actor—who has also been sued for $100,000 by a process server who claims Borgnine bent him up when he tried to serve divorce papers—denied he had threatened his wife or children. His attorney, Joe Ball, testified that "He only wants to visit with

Observer Christmas Gift Ideas

Russell Baker's column appears in this space on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. The other days belong to Art Buchwald. Tomorrow is one of the other days—a Thursday and a Buchwald Day. It is also Thanksgiving Day (which often seems to fall on a Thursday) and tomorrow once again. Buchwald will get first crack at the Thanksgiving Day trade, leaving the leftovers to Baker. Is that fair? Not at all, especially since this year Buchwald also gets Christmas and New Year's Days. To make amends, we are giving Baker first digs at the pre-Christmas business with this column that has stood the test of time.

WASHINGTON—Industry has been shamefully indifferent to the widening gift gap. Every December it offers the same tired chinees, neckties, picture books, glass chasers, shooting sticks, camel saddles, minked neckties, minked neckties, minked neckties. Merely reeling the list is enough to make a man want to shoot Santa Claus.

We need a whole new line of gifts. Why not, for example, a collapsible portable space? It would fold into a small package and fit easily into a car trunk, thus eliminating once and for all the time-killing, soul-searching chore of looking for a parking space. Canned laughter would make another excellent gift, especially if sold in the easy-to-open six-pack. When the boss tells a joke, simply pop the top. Seven years of wear and tear on those tired old laugh muscles. How about a brussels-sprout-eating machine? A pocket-sized battery-powered brussels-sprout-eater placed on the table would take up no more room than a coffee cup and would require its owner the drab necessity of eating the things for himself. With modifications it might be converted into a spinach-eating machine, making it the ideal gift for children.

The gift manufacturers suffer from tired imaginations. They should have seen years ago the sales potential of the glass-top shoe. Not only does it discourage its owner, from the nasty habit of dropping the other shoe, it also gives him an unostentatious method of showing his friends that he doesn't have a hole in his sock.

The book industry has consistently ignored an enormous new market, the speed-reading. What better gift for a speed-reading friend than a brand new edition of "War and Peace" printed in invisible ink?

Sunglass headlights would make a perfect gift for that hard-to-please playboy or playgirl who has to wear his/her sunglasses on in the dark restaurants in order to say in character.

And what about suit stains in serotol cans for the man who has everything? At present, a man with a new suit or necktie has to let the necktie or suit pick up its own stains the first time he wears it.

A gift set of spray-on clothing stains would enable its recipient to satisfy his suit's stain craving at home, thus diminishing the likelihood that the suit in its hunger may provoke a humiliating gaff spill to public.

Mother Stands In For Elizabeth II

LONDON, Nov. 23 (UPI)—Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother stood in for her ailing daughter the queen at today's investiture ceremony, a Buckingham Palace spokesman said. The queen was still confined to her room with chicken pox, the spokesman added. She contracted the disease yesterday. "We've had no bulletins on the queen's health today, but we surely would have heard if it had deteriorated," the spokesman added.

Studying Prehistory by Reconstructing It

By Jan Sjöby

LEIRE, Denmark (HTT)—A mile west of this village—where King Hrothgar held court and Beowulf slew Grendel—the expanse of rolling countryside is dotted with prehistoric remains. Among burial mounds, stone settings and the ruins of Neolithic flint-axe factories lies the Leire Historical-Archaeological Research Center.

At the center anyone interested may find out just how prehistoric man tilled the soil while his mate worked her spinning wheel.

The Leire Center is a 100-acre spread of land where all kinds of historical-archaeological notions are put to a test. Under scientific control, experiments are being carried out to find out how tools and methods, raw materials, animals and people were used and functioned in the days before the mechanized and commercialized society.

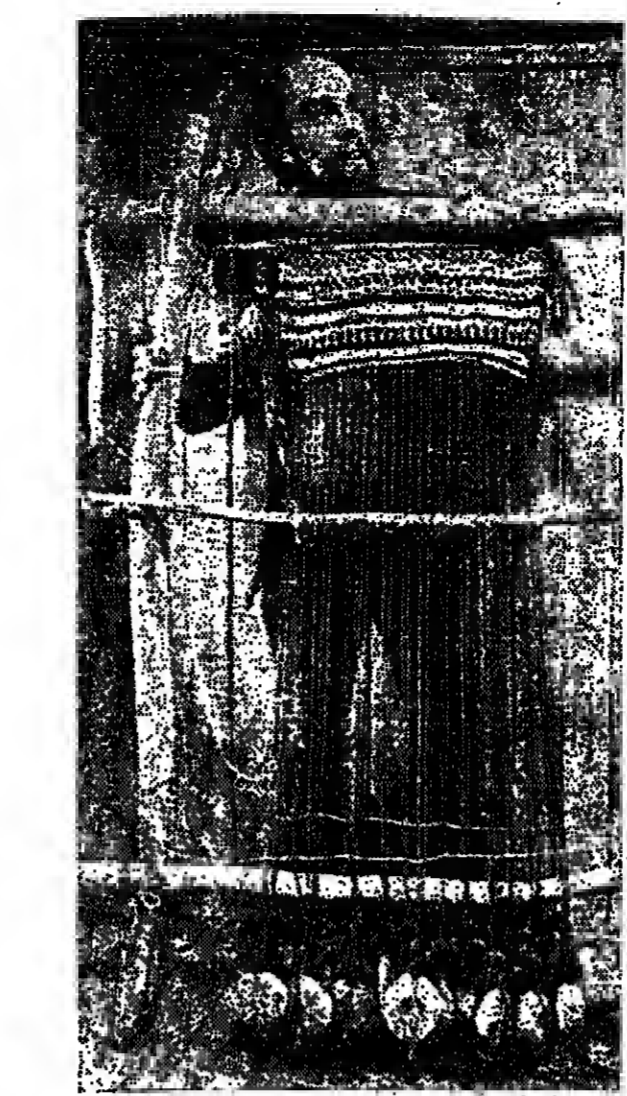

The time span is ambitious—from Neolithic until "quite" recent but forgotten times. The range of disciplines served is equally ambitious: Prehistory, archaeology, cultural anthropology, ecology, animal husbandry and agriculture.

It had its beginning in 1956 when Hans Ole Hansen, a high school student in nearby Roskilde, decided to build a Neolithic house just the way the Stone Age people had built them. He was the son of well-known author Martin A. Hansen who, in his later years, had turned increasingly toward Danish cultural history.

Factors

"It was a combination of factors," explains Mr. Hansen, now 32, founder and research leader of the Leire Center. "We had moved to Leire when I was 11. The local kids didn't know what an 'author' was and I became known as the professor's boy. I didn't make any real contacts. Then there was the milieu at home—shelf after shelf of books on archaeology and Danish prehistory and I read most of them along with the Donald Duck magazines. Then there seems to be an innate handiness with tools in our family. I suppose I became obsessed with remembrances of things past."

In 1956, young Hansen decided to build his Stone Age house. "I suppose I was inspired by Thor Heyerdahl and his Kon-Tiki trip," Mr. Hansen said. "He set out to show how the South Americans could have made it to Polynesia. I set out to show how a Stone Age house could have been built with primitive tools and how the inhabitants could have survived in winter."

Later, Mr. Hansen graduated from the Cathedral School in Roskilde and went on to the Institute of European Ethnology at the University of Copenhagen. He received his MA in 1966.

By then, the plans and the groundwork for the Leire Center were well underway. In 1964, Mr. Hansen and a friend, Svend Nielsen—now inspector at the Danish National Museum of Agriculture—had decided that they wanted to start a historical-archaeological research center—a place where historical and archaeological information could be tested and evaluated. A large tract of land was needed, along with firelocks, primitive tools and, naturally, a lot of money.

"The Carlsberg Foundation in Copenhagen was great," says Mr. Hansen. "We presented our plans and they granted us 400,000 Danish crowns over a three-year period. Tell me what other institution would have granted $54,000 to a couple of green students who knew what they wanted but didn't really know how to go about it all.

The elite of Danish professors and cultural writers, though, supported us from the beginning. In the early years, the Leire Center had some problems separating public information (considered "public entertainment" by Copenhagen highbrows) from the basic scientific research carried out at the center. By now, Mr. Hansen has found a solution: "We decide on a project, say, Neolithic iron processing. We spend a couple of months in research and preparatory work. Then we let students in—grade school to postgraduate levels—to look it over. When the students are through, the general public is welcome to look and wonder."

The programs are staggered: The first research program on next year's agenda will be the growing of primitive strains of grain in fields tilled with primitive implements. The results of the tests will be displayed to the general public in April. While the grain program is underway, ecological tests will be started to determine how Iron Age animal husbandry influenced the balance of nature in a typical Danish landscape. Other tests next season will include textile production with finger and foot looms and dyeing techniques and studies of the actual indoors environment in an Iron Age hut and a Danish farmhouse from the mid-1900s.

The relevant results of such tests will be reported as usual in scientific papers, which are distributed to scholars around the world.

"The most spectacular of the tests so far," Mr. Hansen recalls, "was when we reconstructed a house from the archaeological surveys of the remains of a burned-down Iron Age hut. We rebuilt it in detail, placed various items (reptiles, of course) of household goods inside, along with electronic thermometers and other scientific equipment. Then we set the thing on fire and were able to compare our Iron Age hut with the real thing, to take notes of how the ashes settled and how various types of pottery cracked and were discolored. It was an expensive experiment but we picked up a lot of very useful knowledge for the interpretation of archaeological information."
